About EMSD Headquarters:

Situated at 3 Kai Shing Street, Kowloon Bay, the former Hong Kong Air Cargo Terminal 2 building was converted into the EMSD headquarters building in 2005, which is a pilot revitalization and green building exemplary project, as manifested in its revitalization and adaptive reuse, environmentally friendly design and educational facilities, construction method, as well as less demolition and construction waste. There is a dedicated Education Path in the headquarters building, which is intended to promote awareness of energy efficiency and renewable energy technologies and to introduce the work of EMSD through the use of fun interactive exhibits for members of the public to learn more about building sustainability.

The Education Path comprises two exhibition facilities, outdoor energy efficiency features and a rooftop viewing gallery that offers a view of an array of over 2,000 photovoltaic panels covering around 10,000m² roof. The exhibition gallery on G/F contains many exhibits to introduce energy efficiency, its related legislation, renewable energy features, and the initiatives of EMSD on sustainable development. In the linking corridor of the exhibition area and the rooftop viewing gallery, there are energy saving facilities: the sun pipe, displacement ventilation system, and the lighting system controlled by motion and daylight sensors are on display. Visitors can also appreciate the outdoor solar/green features in the external areas of the headquarters building.
