

The BMS Standard – BACnet – Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow Technical Seminar - 04 June 2015

Since its incubation within ASHRAE from 1987, BACnet (ASHRAE Standard 135) has now grown to be the most commonly used communication protocol in building management systems. It has been adopted by ANSI and ISO as the building automation communication standard. Moreover, HK SAR has also adopted this standard as part of the AC GS.

Speaker: Raymond Rae - Vice President - Delta Controls, Inc.

Raymond Rae is the Vice President of Delta Controls Inc., a full line manufacturer of native BACnet systems for Building Automation Systems (BAS). Raymond co-founded the Delta Controls Group in 1980, which now has thousands of installations worldwide. Raymond has enjoyed more than 40 years in the HVAC industry and has an extensive background, which includes: energy auditing, computerized building simulations, system commissioning, controls, engineering, product certifications, design, and marketing. Raymond has been a member of ASHRAE since 1984.

Raymond has been a very active member of the BACnet Community. Activities include founding director of BACnet Manufacturers Association (BMA) in 2000, and also BACnet International (BI) in 2006. Raymond served as a director for BMA from inception to the formation of BI and has continued as a director of BI to present and served as Chairman of the Board for 2014. Raymond also was recognized for his work in the BACnet Community in 2014 with the Leader of the Pack – Doberman Pincher Award in 2014.

During the seminar, Raymond will present the stories behind the development of BACnet and experience gathered in this continuously evolving standard. He will also sharing with participant more about the technologies enablers of the standard and the latest development and outlook where the standard will be heading to.
